EDITORIAL

The main service in both our churches every Sunday is the Parish Communion. Yet, when I talk to people, I am surprised to find how few realise why this is so. Indeed, many seem to think that both Mattins and Holy Communion are equally suitable services to have on Sunday mornings, and so you simply choose the one you like best! But this is not so. There are several reasons why the Parish Communion has to be the main act of worship every Sunday.

The Order of Holy Communion in the Book of Common Prayer contains the words, "Jesus Christ . . . . did institute, and in his holy Gospel command us to continue, a perpetual memory of that his precious death, until his coming again". The first reason, then, that we make the Parish Communion our main act of worship every Sunday is that Jesus himself told us to do so.

People in Ackworth are very keen supporters of tradition. They do things because they have always done them. In the Acts of the Apostles, we read how the very first Christians met together on the first day of the week to break bread. Every week for more than nineteen centuries, groups of Christians have met together to do the same. By making the Parish Communion our main act of worship every Sunday, we are continuing this tradition.

Whenever we come to church, there are some things we always do. We always praise God, either in hymns or psalms. We always hear the Bible read. We always confess our sins, and we usually pray for others. But there are some things we only do when we come to Holy Communion. It is only at Holy Communion that bread and wine are placed on the altar, blest, and shared.

The bread and wine, food and drink, are symbols of our lives. When the bread and wine are placed on the altar, our lives - the good and the bad in them - are placed there too. We offer our lives to God.

The bread and the wine are blest with the words Jesus himself used at the Last Supper: "This is my body - this is my blood". Jesus' offering of himself on the cross becomes a present reality. The bread and wine become his body and blood. The bread and wine which represented our lives become his life and our lives are offered to God in union with, and purified by, his perfect offering of himself on the cross.

Finally, the bread and wine are distributed. When we eat and drink, we feed on Christ himself. His life comes into us, and we are fully grafted into him.

To sum up, we must make the Parish Communion our main act of worship on Sunday because first, Christ himself told us to do this; second, because Christians have always done so and third, because in doing so we become fully incorporated into the life of Christ.

STILL VALID

In 1950 the Archbishops of Canterbury and York issued their "Short Guide to the Duties of Church Membership". In it, they wrote:

"All baptised and confirmed members of the Church must play their full part in its life and witness. We call upon you:

To follow the example of Christ in home and life, and to bear personal witness to Him

To be regular in private prayer day by day

To read the Bible carefully

To come to Church every Sunday

To receive the Holy Communion faithfully and regularly.

To give personal service to Church, neighbours and community.

To give money for the work of parish and diocese and for the work of the Church at home and overseas."

How closely do you follow this guide?

WHAT WENT WRONG?

Terrible floods hit a town near the South Eastern coastline of the United States, but a Christian decided to stay in his house "God will save me" he said. As the flood water was rising to chest height a man came by in a boat but the Christian refused to climb aboard. "God will save me", he said. The flood waters got so bad that the Christian had to climb up on the roof and still the water level was rising. A helicopter flew over to take off survivors but the Christian refused to be winched up. "God will save me" he shouted. Just after that the floods closed over his head and he drowned.

The Christian went to Heaven. "What went wrong?" he said to God, "You didn't save me". "What went wrong?" replied God, "I sent you a boat and a helicopter".

THE WARNOCK REPORT

The first so-called 'test-tube' baby was born in Oldham General Hospital in 1978. The public debate after this event, together with speculation about experiments on embryos and about surrogate mothers, led to the government setting up the Warnock Inquiry in 1982. Its task was to consider these and other developments; to look at social, medical and legal aspects of new policies and safeguards; and to make recommendations for the future.

The Inquiry has recently published its report. After a period of public debate, it is expected that legislation will be put before Parliament based largely on the Warnock proposals.

The report falls into two sections. The first section deals with recent and new techniques for dealing with severe problems of infertility. These include artificial insemination, in vitro fertilisation where sperm and egg are brought together outside the body, and surrogacy where another woman carries and bears the child which is then handed over to the couple which commissioned it.

Warnock regards all these methods as morally acceptable EXCEPT surrogacy. However the report recognises that these developments raise many complex new problems for parents, for medical personnel, for the law, and (perhaps most of all) for children born by these techniques. So the report makes detailed proposals for the regulation of fertility services and techniques.

The second section of the report deals with research on embryos and related matters. It allows that, subject to very strict conditions, research may be carried out on embryos up to the fourteenth day of life (after which the first signs of individual life occur). Any use of embryos on other terms would be a criminal offence.

The most important proposal of the entire report is for the setting-up of a new Licensing Body to regulate both infertility services and research, and to establish guidelines on what kinds of research would be considered ethical.

A CHALLENGE TO HIGHTOWN

ONE PARISH in our Diocese is facing up to the realities of church buildings.

A Special Parochial Meeting at St Barnabas', Hightown on Sunday, 23rd September called for the present church to be replaced as soon as possible. The 91 year old listed building is in need of substantial repair, and does not provide the facilities that are needed. Action is needed urgently, and the church members see a new building as the only way forward. Besides providing attractive surroundings for worship, it would also have meeting-rooms suitable for the various groups associated with the Church.

Despite the daunting size of this project, the meeting accepted the challenge of raising the necessary money. It is hoped to sell some surplus land, but about £60,000 will still need to be raised. Half of this is being called for, in cash or pledges, by the end of January. This is thought necessary to show the national and diocesan Church authorities the degree of local support. The pledges will be called in only when work starts and after all necessary permissions have been obtained. The church members have committed themselves to give and work towards a new building, and have called on the people of Hightown to follow their example.

Speaking after the meeting the Vicar, the Revd Roger Stokes, said that he saw the decision as a courageous facing up to hard realities. "It is never easy to let go of the old and familiar," he said, "but action is needed. If the people of Hightown want to be able to call on the Church in the future they need to give towards it now."

HOMECOMING FOR NEW ARCH-DEACON

FOLLOWING the announcement of the retirement of the present Archdeacon of Halifax, John Alford, the Bishop of Wakefield has appointed as his successor a man who was born in Birchencliffe and spent a good deal of his early Church life in Elland. He is Canon Alan David Chesters, at present Rector of Brancepeth in Durham Diocese, and Director of Education for his Diocese. He is married to Jennie, who is headteacher of a Church Aided primary school, and they have a son, David, aged 6. There is no firm date yet for their arrival in the Diocese, but it is expected that Canon Chesters will take up his duties early in 1985.

"ONWARD CHRISTIAN SOLDIER!"

Canon William Purcell, biographer of Sabine Baring Gould and editor of 'The Sign' will preach at St John's Church, Horbury Bridge, for whose children the now famous hymn was written, on Sunday November 18th at the Centenary Celebrations attended by the Lord Mayor of Wakefield and Consort, at 10.30 am. This lovely little church should be packed to overflowing for the climax of a year of celebration and effort which included the building by voluntary labour of toilets onto the Church Hall, which was the first Mission and School. The romantic and moving story of Baring Gould, his courtship and his pioneering work of evangelism at 'the Brig' are told in a booklet full of original research by the Headmaster and pupils of St John's School, by Mr Tom Depledge, from whom copies may be obtained.

OUR BISHOP WRITES . . . THE CATHEDRAL

MANY PEOPLE IMAGINE that a Bishop spends much of his time in the Cathedral. Certainly he is there on major festivals and for big diocesan occasions. But most of his energies are properly engaged elsewhere in the diocese and parishes. Responsibility for the daily life of the Cathedral rests with the Provost and Canons, with authority dispersed between the Chapter, the Cathedral Council and the Parochial Church Council.

However, the Bishop enjoys the title of Visitor of the Cathedral. And this gives him the right to 'hold a visitation whenever he thinks fit', at which 'all ministers, officers and servants of the Cathedral Church shall appear 'before him, answer his questions, and make any representations they wish'.

Such language has a Barchester ring about it: a fault finding investigation into a recalcitrant community! Yet a visitation can be conducted in a modern way so that the Bishop can be alongside the Cathedral community in thinking through the kind of ministries it should be offering in the parish, the city and the diocese over the next few years. It was in this spirit that I was glad to accept the Provost's invitation to hold a week's visitation in December.

I shall be joined by four Assessors who will give expert attention to particular facets of the Cathedral life: its music and worship; its fabric and finances; its statutes and administration. We shall meet the Chapter, the Cathedral Council and the Parochial Church Council. And we shall be exploring the nature of the Cathedral ministry in the City centre. How it relates to local government, the business community, schools, hospitals, the police, voluntary societies and charities, arts and cultural bodies, and churches of other traditions. We shall be concerned with the well being of the Cathedral congregation, and also the Cathedral's ministry to visitors. There are wider issues, too, concerning the relation of the Cathedral to the diocese and parishes, and the role of the Friends.

Yet in all this it is the people who love and serve the Cathedral who really matter. And so we shall be talking informally with the clergy (and their wives, too), the musicians, choir parents and families, the servers and ringers, the wardens, the administrative and domestic staffs, the guides and voluntary helpers. We need to know their mind on their Cathedral.

Day by day the Cathedral upholds the life of the diocese in the course of its worship. In December your Cathedral would value your prayers as it looks to the future.

RICHARD WILLIAM PHILLIPS. 'Dick' to many of his contemporaries and 'Father' to a wide circle of those he served, was a much loved and respected priest of the Diocese of Wakefield. Trained for the priesthood by the Society of the Sacred Mission, Kelham, Fr. Phillips came to the Diocese in 1938, having served in the Dioceses of Chelmsford and York, moving from Wrangbrook in 1943 to become parish priest of St Peter's, Barnsley, his ministry there continuing until 1965 when he became parish priest of Womersley with Kirk Smeaton. His devoted ministry throughout is remembered by former parishioners with gratitude and affection. The introduction of a parish newspaper and the pioneering of one of the very early Christian Stewardship campaigns were two of the outstanding activities at St Peter's during his distinguished incumbency. In 1955 Fr. Phillips was elected Proctor in Convocation and his subsequent election as Prolocutor of the Lower House of the York Convocation was a measure of the esteem in which he was held. His wise and able contributions to some of the crucial debates at that time, commanded considerable attention, with recognition of his leadership in championing matters of Catholic principle in the Church of England. As Chairman

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

WHAT CONFERENCE?

Why didn't more attend the holiday conference at Bretton Hall in August? It was super!

Interesting Christian speakers talked about marriage and family guidance, healing and growth and psychotherapy, in the beautiful setting of Bretton Hall to about 30 of us. Mostly laity, I think, although it is hard to identify clergy in shirts and shorts (they do have hairy legs like other men!) I prefer them that way - the clergy I mean, although I don't object to hairy legs either. The dog collar can sometimes be a barrier between 'them and us'.

You didn't know about the conference, or received the See-Link insert in your magazine too late to arrange to come?

Why does so little information about conferences, courses, homes of healing, retreats and other events organised by 'the Church' get through to the laity?

Is it apathy, or fear by some clergy that we might become too well informed and demanding?

There are few of us who do not have family or friends with problems of some sort, not to mention ourselves, and we are all pilgrims wanting to grow.

If we are to be healed or to follow Christ's injunction to 'go out and heal', please, clergy, pass on the information to us. Fewer of us will then need to struggle along and alone in the dark.

Pat Rowan

of the Church Union in the Diocese, Dick Phillips exercised a marked influence upon both clergy and laity. The annual Solemn Eucharist at Monk Bretton Priory, gathering people from all parts of the Diocese, was dear to his heart and his inspiration in the Barnsley area drew an increasing number of people to the Shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham. He was made an Honorary Canon of Wakefield Cathedral in 1968, much to the delight of his many friends and his own happiness. Canon Phillips continued to exercise his ministry at Howden Minster during his retirement, still maintaining close links with friends in our Diocese. His death early in September, in York, brought a sense of loss mingled with profound thanksgiving for a deeply dedicated and gifted priest. With characteristic humility he would, did he know of them, disclaim some of the things written of him here. His personal charm, warmth and friendliness, his impish humour and the twinkle in the eye endeared him to so many people. His love of God and the people of God shone through him. His Requiem and Funeral Mass at Kirk Smeaton and Womersley was in a sense a homecoming. May he rest in peace and rise in glory.

Christians will differ in their attitude to Warnock's treatment of these difficult questions. Some see the new techniques as against the plan of the created order and as an assault on marriage and the family. Others see the techniques as methods which, with careful and discriminating use, can overcome the condition of infertility and bring into being much-wanted and much-loved children, thus actually promoting the cause of the family. Some Christians are opposed to all research on the grounds that the embryo is a human person deserving total protection. Others, taking the view that in some circumstances the embryo merits only limited protection, would support limited research on early embryos. They would weigh the loss of these embryos against the benefits which can accrue to countless future persons in terrible diseases being overcome as a result of this research. All would reject the uncontrolled pursuit of research on embryos.

Many people welcome these new possibilities if they could be confined to their intended purpose. But they fear that by agreeing with these advances, we may slide down a slippery slope into a horror world of perverted values. To that extent Warnock's demand for strict legal and other controls should be widely welcomed.
